Fundamental Risks for Mutual Funds

Market Risk: Market risk is defined as the risk of loss in value of the financial instruments that represent borrowing, equities, other securities, derivatives positions based on FX and financial instruments based on FX due to fluctuations on FX rates, equity prices and interest rates.

Interest Rate Risk: In case interest-driven products exist in the portfolio (such as reverse repo, debt instruments etc.), risk in mentioned assets' value might arise due to fluctuations in interest rates.

Exchange Risk: Represents the possibility of loss that might arise due to fluctuations in exchange rate, in case foreign currency denominated assets exist in fund portfolio.

Partnership Share Price Risk: In case the partnership share is included in the fund portfolio, it represents the probability of loss that the portfolio will be exposed to due to changes in the prices of partnership shares in the fund portfolio.

Counterparty Risk: The possibility of the non-payment risk, in case when the counterparty does not want to and/or cannot fulfill its duties specified on the agreement, or due to consequences of any inconveniences that may arise during the settlement process.

Liquidity Risk: The possibility of loss that arises in case the investment products held within the fund's portfolio could not be liquidated into cash with market price when required.

Leverage Risk: The possibility of losing more than the initial investment amount of the fund due to usage of the initial investment amount to open bigger positions, by investing in derivative instruments (futures and option contracts), embedded derivatives, SWAP contracts, warrant, certificate, or by creating leverage through bills/bonds with future value-date, gold transactions or any other method.

Operational Risk: The possibility of loss due to disruption in the fund's operational processes. In house factors like; inadequacy of systems used, unsuccessful management, incorrect or tricky transactions of staff and out house factors like natural disasters, conditions of competition, changing politic structure can be causes of operational risk.

Concentration Risk: Indicating the risk as a result of intensive investment in a certain asset and / or maturity.

Correlation Risk: It is the probability of loss that may arise due to positive or negative relations of at least two different financial assets in parallel with the simultaneous appreciation or loss of different financial assets under market conditions.

Legal Risk: The risk that the fund's shares may be adversely affected by the changes that may occur in the legislation and regulation of regulatory authorities after the sale.

Country Risk: Economic, political, social structure and interest and FX strategies of countries can be very effective on price of the product. These risks that can be defined as local risks might be restrictions on FX, transfer risks, moratorium, changes on taxes etc. Moreover, possible changes on global economic and politic balances can be the cause of fluctuations on fund price.

Issuer Risk: The possibility of loss arising from the failure of the issuer of the assets included in the fund portfolio to fulfil its obligations in whole or in part.

Ethical Risk: The risk of fraud, misconduct, embezzlement, theft, deliberate actions that may harm the Fund or crimes that may adversely affect the reputation of the Founder (e.g. money laundering).

Base Risk: It expresses the change in price difference between the current value of futures contracts and the value of the spot price of the relevant financial instrument. At the end of the contractual maturity, the forward price and the spot price are equal to each other. However, the forward price and the spot price may differ from the theoretical pricing in the time elapsed between the transaction date and the maturity date for the related futures financial instruments in the fund portfolio. Therefore, here it refers to the risk of change in the Base Value throughout the contract's term.
